There are men who would propose marriage to us whose business would keep them two-thirds of the times and their country at heart and the interest of the nation in their hands to visit the Treasury and look over the accounts of General George Washington while he was Commander in-Chief of the American amy during the revolutionary war. For entirely subject to the privations of the backwoods. There are others, confirmed invalids, who, because we are pleasing to them, clock us to the station of their nurses for life. Others are poor as pov-erty, yet not for a moment do they hearmen in the matter of association are un-pleasing. All are possessed of qualities which render association with them agree-able. But the law of to-day seems to be that the moment a single lady sees some-thing in a man to admire, and allows him in a man to admire, and allows him in a man to admire, and allows him the present day. The title page bears the following inscription:

He threatens either eniode or revenge. (Mr. Elitor, I've got a trunk fail of just such desperate letters, and I'm half inclined to publish one coossionally, without signature, of course, just in order that some of their lordships, who daily carry their heads very high on Montgomery street, may see now their intensity looks in print.) I ask again, why may not a lady enjoy congenial mascaline asponations, b sed on propriety, which is a social to the public offices. bellows buys in my time, and know pretty well their idiocyneracies—the chief, of well their idnosyncracies—the chief of the which is an inconceivable ingenuity of invention and execution of mischievous pranks and espere, that in due time flower into positive diabolism. Of course, they are always smart; lithe as eels, venturesome as monkeys, unconscious of reverence, defiant of decorum, oblivious of rules, aspiring and ambitious after a sort; they are the larve of scamps, the employed of dare-devils. Always boys, they never reach adolescence in that sphere, oburch in their manly pursuit and delegation. bryo of dare-devils. Always boys, they never reach addecocace in that sphere, but emerge, I suspect, from—their organ loft chrysalts into first-class acrobate, gymnasis and flying-trapezs men. There is great wrateemb'ance in the race, its invalues in the first class acrobate, its intermediate in the race, its invalues in the first class acrobate, its invalues of the first class acrobate, its invalues of the control of the revolution of 1776. Not being permitted to preach in churches of their own, the Baptist of one of whose members Sir Walter Scott has so well limited.
